Watson Woods Update

The Monsoon Season has been kind to Watson Woods so far, providing much needed nourishment and moisture for our trees, wildlife, restoration areas, and the Creek! The changes have been dramatic: Granite Creek (which was dry as recently as July 3rd) is not only flowing in its main channel but has overflowed into many "braided" channels that have delivered water throughout the Preserve, creating extremely valuable seasonal wetlands and pools.

To get an illustration on these "monsoon" conditions, take a look at Gregg's blog.

Watershedding

Recently mother nature delivered some much needed precipitation to the Central Arizona Highlands. The parched earth got a much needed drink of water and we enjoyed cooler temperatures, dramatic skies, and rare humidity. See how this effects our urbanizing area.

Rain

With recent rains many of our creeks have been flowing. See the flow from
