CWAG Spring Water Conservation Class

Beginning the last week of January, CWAG will offer an EPA-grant-supported class titled "Water Conservation and Environmental Problem Solving." The class goal is to increase leadership capacity for environmental problem solving related specifically to water conservation.

Enrollment in this free water class is limited to 30 people. The class will meet in the County Extension Service classroom at the rodeo grounds from 6:30 p.m. until 8:30 p.m. on January 28, February 4, 11 and 25; March 4 and 14. Following five lectures on water conservation and related environmental issues presented by highly qualified instructors, students will participate in the hands-on installation of a rainwater harvesting system on Saturday, March 14.

To enroll, contact Project Director Donna Putschoegl at twoputschoegl@aol.com

Development & Communications Position

Prescott Creeks seeks a full-time, salaried Development & Communications Manager to assist its Executive Director, and staff, to raise funds from diverse sources in the community to support the mission of the organization. The Development & Communications Manager reports directly to the Executive Director and will work closely with staff, the Board of Directors, and volunteers to develop and implement development and marketing plans and strategies, as well as take the lead to engage the community through various hands-on and fundraising events. Full position announcement and description can be found at www.PrescottCreeks.org/jobs.
